Tournament Format

Eight teams were placed in two groups and played a round-robin series within each group. The groups were arranged vertically, not horizontally, so the top-ranked teams played in Group A and the lower-ranked in Group B. The top two teams from Group A advanced directly to the semi-finals, while the third and fourth place teams in Group A qualified for the quarter-finals along with the top two teams of Group B. The quarter-finals had 3A-2B and 4A-1B matchups. Winners advanced to the semi-finals, and those winners to the gold-medal game. Semi-finals losers played for bronze. The losers of the quarter-finals went to the classification round along with the third and fourth teams in Group B. Those winners played for fifth place while the losers played for seventh place. The team that finished eighth played a best-of-three series with the winner of Division I to determine which team qualified for the top level of the 2015 Women's Worlds and which team was relegated to Division I.

*demoted to Division I for 2009

Tournament Format

Nine nations were divided into three groups of three and played a round-robin series within each. The top team from each group advanced to one group (D); the second-place teams advanced to a second group (E); and, the bottom three advanced to a last group (F). Once again, they played a round-robin series within each new group. The top two teams from group D advanced to the gold-medal game. The third team from this group played the top team from the second-place group (E) for the bronze medal. The last team from the final group (F) was relegated to Division I for the following year. Teams received three points for a regulation time victory. All games tied after 60 minutes went to overtime and, if needed, a shootout. The winner in OT/SO received two points and the loser one point.

Tournament Format

Eight teams were placed in two groups and played a round-robin series within each group. For the first time, the groups were arranged vertically, not horizontally, so the top-ranked teams played in Group A and the lower-ranked in Group B. All teams from Group A advanced to the playoffs. The top two went directly to the semi-finals while the bottom two played a crossover quarter-finals with the top two from Group B. The bottom two in Group B played a best two-of-three series in the Relegation Round.

*Promoted from Division I-A for 2015; Demoted to Division I-A for 2016

Tournament Format

There were two divisions of four teams, and each played a round-robin series in a preliminary round. The groups were determined by World Ranking, the top four being placed in Group A and the next four in Group B. All teams from Group A and the top two teams from Group B qualified for the playoffs. The top two teams in Group A qualified directly to the semi-finals, while the third and fourth teams played the top two teams in Group B in the quarter-finals. The last two teams in Group B played a best-of-three series to determine which team would be relegated.

*Promoted from Division I-A for 2016; Demoted to Division I-A for 2017

Tournament Format

There were two divisions of four teams, and each played a round-robin series in a preliminary round. The groups were determined by World Ranking, the top four being placed in Group A and the next four in Group B. All teams from Group A and the top two teams from Group B qualified for the playoffs. The top two teams in Group A qualified directly to the semi-finals, while the third and fourth teams played the top two teams in Group B in the quarter-finals. The last two teams in Group B played a best-of-three series to determine which team would be relegated.

PLAYERS' REGISTER, MEN

Active Skaters, Men

(event-by-event summary for recently-active skaters internationally who play in the top level)

At 1992 WM20, the Soviet Union played as Commonwealth of Independent States beginning January 1, 1992; at 1992 OG-M, Russia played as the Unified Team but the name was later changed to Russia for historical consistency; at 1993 WM20, Czechoslovakia played as Czech/Slovak Republics. Where a player's summary statistics include participation from an earlier national incarnation and a current one (i.e., TCH and CZE), the more recent abbreviation is used.
